Getting your Digital Marketing in Sync

SMALL BUSINESS SOLUTIONS
Pretty much every small business owner would agree… marketing and advertising have changed dramatically in the past 5 years. Today, an attractive website alone isn’t enough – it needs to be built with the latest technology (80% of websites aren’t), it has to be mobile-friendly, secure, and designed to be the center of your online marketing. Plus, you have to be on social – Facebook and more. You need paid search and display ads. And don’t forget about online listings and customer reviews. How do you keep up?

That’s a good question, but really, the more important question today is… how do you make all those parts work together?

Let’s look at one small business owner’s story…
Small business spotlight:

INTRODUCING JOE

Joe owns Airmanor, Heating and Air Conditioning – a local business that’s a lot like yours. He struggled to keep up with the changing technology. He was bringing in fewer new customers… losing out to his competition online.

See if Joe’s challenges sound familiar…
Joe’s Challenges

All the ways a small business struggles to keep up with digital marketing

Incorrect information online
Joe claimed his Google listing… but he kept seeing incorrect information about his business online. He had no idea how to correct it.

Negative reviews
Joe’s been told he has some bad reviews online …but he doesn’t know what to do about them – or how to get more positive reviews.

Out-of-date website
Joe’s website is over three years old and hasn’t been touched in at least two years. It’s not bringing in leads and falling farther down the search results.

Competitors’ ads everywhere
Joe’s really annoyed that his top competitor has ads online that keep popping up on all of Joe’s favorite websites.

Ad campaign too costly, no leads
Joe tried using paid search ads, but he burned through a month’s budget in just a few days… and it wasn’t getting him many leads!

Lacking necessary expertise
Overall, Joe’s frustrated because he simply doesn’t know where or how to start to solving his digital marketing challenges.
Joe’s BIGGEST Challenge

The biggest digital marketing challenge today:

Nothing is in Sync

Joe’s biggest challenge was one he never even thought about… the fact that his digital marketing had become a bunch of separate, disconnected pieces. Rather than have a single, interconnected marketing solution working in sync… Joe had a series of disjointed components.

Joe’s starting to realize that, even if he finds a way to solve his other challenges, he’ll never maximize his results if he doesn’t get all his different marketing working together to put his brand and business message in front of his potential customers as they go through the buying journey.
Today’s consumer journey includes three very clear steps...

Search, Discover and Engage

When someone is shopping for a product or service today they go through three simple steps...

1. They SEARCH for information about what they need

2. They DISCOVER their options

3. They reach out and ENGAGE with the business that best meets their needs
Today’s customer journey

As your customers search, discover and engage, their journey can include a dozen steps or more – search engines, social media pages, ads, websites, review pages and more.

You might think that a “search” always starts with a search engine, like Google, Yahoo! or Bing – but a user’s search for information could just as easily start when they click on an ad, or see a post (paid or personal) on Facebook. Maybe it starts with a conversation on Messenger – you just don’t know… so you have to make sure you’re everywhere they might look.
Digital marketing today: having all the pieces

Not that long ago, a website alone was arguably all your business needed to have a “presence” online. Some basic SEO could get you found in search and that was all you needed to worry about.

Today, your digital marketing strategy has to include a plan that will keep your business in front of your customers as they move from shoppers to buyers… and that takes more than just a website.
Digital marketing today: Your business website

No matter how or where your customers are searching for you, ultimately it will lead them to the heart of today’s digital marketing… your website.

In business today, you have to keep moving forward to stay ahead of your competition. Standing still is not an option.

At the center of everything you do is your website. If your business is going to compete online, your website has to effectively position you as the better choice. Everything you do, online and off, leads to your website, so it has to close the deal – it has to turn visitors into customers.

Just as important, your site has to keep up with everchanging technology and evolving customer behavior. Your competitors will be updating their sites – if you fail to keep up, you will fail to attract new customers.

Is your website keeping up with your competition?

80% of websites don’t have the advanced technology to perform the way they should.¹

91% of small businesses plan to improve their website this year.²
Is your website tomorrow-proof?

Can you answer “Yes” to these 6 Questions about about your site?

1. Is your business ready for voice?
In 2018, an estimated 60 million Americans will do a voice search - like “Hey, Alexa...” or “Ok, Google...” - at least once a month. Do Alexa and Google have the right info for your business? If someone asks about you, or your type of business, will they find you?

2. Is your site built with "schema"?
The majority of websites today simply aren’t built to give you the best ranking in search or to get you found with voice search. Your site has to be built with special coding called schema... or it just won't get seen the way it should. (Note: Hibu Smart Sites are built with schema.)

3. Is your site really mobile-ready and secure?
Today your website must be truly mobile-friendly – that means being easy to use on any device. And it has to be secure. In 2018, Google began identifying sites as “not secure” (i.e., with http, and not https, in the URL)… letting everyone know your website isn’t a safe place to visit.

4. Does your site load too slowly?
If it takes more than three seconds for your site to load, the average searcher will click away. 1 – 2 – 3... gone.³

5. Is it easy for visitors to contact you?
You have to make it easy for site visitors to contact you, in whatever way they choose – click-to-call, text or form. Give them lots of easy options to help them engage with you.

6. Is it in sync with your other marketing?
To maximize results, your site needs to be connected to everything else you do. For example, do visitors immediately see positive customer reviews you’ve received elsewhere on the web? They do when you’re your site is in sync with your other digital marketing.
Today’s digital marketing

Your website needs to be the heart of your digital marketing, but you need a lot more than just a website to make sure your business is everywhere your customers are searching and surfing online.

Establishing a solid foundation

Your website is rarely, if ever, the first thing someone sees about your business online. Taking control of online business information is the first step to building a solid digital foundation. In particular, you need to focus on…

Online Listings

Too many small businesses ignore all the online listings where your business information appears. Your information has to be up-to-date and accurate.

Customer Reviews

You can’t just sit back and hope happy customers will post positive reviews. You have to generate good reviews – and do what you can to flip bad ones to good.

Online Reputation

Your online listings and customer reviews form the first impression prospects and customers get of your business – the core of your online reputation. You need to make sure you manage and control what's being reported about your business.
Today’s digital marketing

Your website may be the heart of your digital marketing, but you need to drive traffic to your site.

Generating leads

The greatest website in the world is useless if no one ever visits it. By using search ads, display ads and social marketing, you can drive targeted, qualified visitors to your site. Then, your website can turn those interested visitors into paying customers.

Search & Display Ads

To succeed online, you have to be where your customers are looking. Search and display ads put you at the top of the search results and on your customers’ top sites.

Social Marketing

Social media is more than a great place for cat videos. The average user spends almost an hour a day on Facebook, Instagram and Messenger. Your business has to be there, and on other social media sites with a page, ads and posts.
Putting the pieces together

If you’re like most small business owners, you’ve expanded your digital marketing over the past few years, adding one piece at a time… probably working with a different vendor for each separate component. Now you’re stuck with a disconnected parts instead of a single, synchronized campaign.

Here’s why that has to change…
Each step is a touchpoint

Choosing a provider today is a journey with a lot of steps. Take a second and imagine what you do every time you need a product or service – what steps do you take to choose a provider?

You need to be in front of your customer every step of the way – especially when you consider that they could begin the journey at any point. You need to be everywhere and anywhere they might be looking and each touchpoint must be in sync – with a consistent brand and message, pushing them forward to becoming a customer.
1 + 1 + 1 = 10

Our real-world results prove that you increase the effectiveness of your digital marketing by increasing the number of touchpoints – simply stated, the more opportunities you give a prospect to engage with you, the greater the results.

Take a look at these numbers that prove when your marketing is in sync you increase results and overall ROI…
The proven impact of sync

Getting your marketing in sync drives more leads

For too long, digital marketing has focused on individual products—a website, search, social, etc. It’s become clear that today a disconnected set of products, each from a different provider, is no longer the optimal business model. Today a comprehensive digital marketing solution, designed to work together to deliver the business goals you want to achieve, is the way to maximize ROI.

For example, as you can see below, by synchronizing your digital marketing you can dramatically increase the number of unique visitors to your website.

The added savings of sync

The added benefits of having a single marketing partner

Save time
Because many small businesses work with a number of different vendors for their digital marketing, they need to make multiple calls every time they need to make a change.

Save money
By working toward a single goal, you can often spend less on individual programs and still increase the response you get.

Reduce frustration
A single partner helps you avoid all the frustration of “routine” updates – whether you’re updating contact info, like business hours, or updating messaging or imagery.
